CANDIDATES IN A DILEMMA

Where Are They At?

The following affidavit has been sworn to by candidates for the Assembly in the Sixty-first District, Messrs. Roberts, Ready and Sherer:

"I am a member of and affiliate with the Republican party, and I desire to be nominated as the sandidate of said party.....and affiant further says: I intend to affiliate with said Republican party at the NEXT ENSUING GENERAL ELECTION."

Theodore Roosevelt, candidate of the Progressive party, in one of his latest speeches said:

"I wish to emphasize the fact that we are absolutely clear from affiliation with either of the old parties;" and in the same speech:

"Ex-Democrats and ex-Republicans alike we hope will share with us the task of building up the Progressive party."

At the time the above declaration was made, Messrs. Roberts and Ready were declaring their intention to vote for Theodore Roosevelt, and so declare themselves now. Do voters intend to accept the sworn statements of Messrs. Roberts and Ready, or their every-day declarations?

J. C. SHERER.

Marriage of Dan Kelty and Alma Stone

Standing under a huge wedding bell of white asters and dressed in a beautiful gown of white messaline with silk lace trimmings, Miss Alma Stone was united in marriage to Mr. Dan Kelty, Jr., at the bride's home in Tropico, on Wednesday evening, August 28th. Mr. Kelty, more familiarly known as "Dan," was dressed in the conventional wedding suit trimmed with his noted "smile." Rev. C. B. Hatch, of the Tropico Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony. The house was handsomely decorated with white asters, wedding bells and ferns. Miss Alta Stone, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, while Mr. Will Turner, a close friend of the groom, served as best man. A wedding supper was served to a large number of relatives of both parties and a few intimate friends. The wedding gifts were numerous and consisted of beautiful cut glass, silverware, etc. As both Mr. and Mrs. Kelty are well known throughout the valley and very popular among the young folks, they were showered with rice and congratulations. The honeymoon will be spent at Catalina, after which the couple will occupy their beautiful new cottage at the corner of Ivy and Pacific streets, Glendale.

HIGH SCHOOL OPENING.

The date for the opening of the high school has been set for Sept. 16. On the afternoons of Sept. 10, 11, 12 and 13, the school will be open for registration. Pupils entering for the first time are especially urged to come on one of these afternoons and plan their course of study. Parents are urged to come with the pupils and help plan the studies to be taken.

"CALIFORNIA JACK" BADLY HURT

A man known among his acquaintances in Glendale as "California Jack" who roomed on Isabel street near the Sanitarium, while riding on a Pacific Electric car, a few nights ago, pitched off the platform head foremost onto the street at Second and Figueroa. He was taken to the hospital and at last accounts was scarcely expected to recover, his skull being apparently fractured.

Mr. Alex Mitchell of Kenneth road who is enjoying Rincon, has been sending picture post cards to his friends, of himself and the numerous fish which he has caught. But he returned home Tuesday, much to the relief of the fish that inhabit the San Gabriel.

THE SAN FERNANDO VALLEY

Great Development Taking Place. A Section where Great Things Are Promised

One must visit the great San Fernando Valley in person and visit it more than once in order to be able to half appreciate its possibilities and what has already been done in the way of development. Until about two years ago, San Fernando was the only place big enough to be on the map north of Burbank and that was a mere village not yet awake to its possibilities. There were a considerable number of people around Lankershim, but it was only known as a prosperous farming community where fruit was grown in alrge quantities for the Los Angeles market. Today Lankershim has also woke up and promises to do much in the way of development in the near future while San Fernando has been transformed during the past year. In the latter town several business blocks have been recently erected and just now work is being pushed on a sixty-thousand dollar hotel. Work is also progressing on a boulevard 100 feet wide connecting San Fernando with the Van Nuys-Owensmouth boulevard, eight miles across the valley. The poles are already in place and grading is proceeding rapidly for the electric road that will run over the center of this boulevard and give the town direct connection by trolley with Los Angeles. But the greatest development of all is in the neighborhood of Van Nuys. The work done there in the past year has been simply marvelous. Van Nuys is now a prosperous town full of business transacted in several brick blocks with fine residences innumerable, all put up within the year with two or three exceptions. The fifteen-mile boulevard is a wonder. It is a hundred and twenty feet wide with an excellent macadamized roadway on both sides and the railroad in the center. The wide parkways on both sides are adorned with ornamental trees, shrubbery and roses. These are making remarkable growth, thanks to the excellent care they receive and in a short time the boulevard will be a drive of great beauty and is now a favorite course for automobiles. The present development would not have been possible if the good roads builder had not gone first. The county highway along the San Fernando road is a fine driveway and reecntly the county has been planting trees along both sides between Tropico and San Fernando. Riding over the valley one is struck by the thought that there is as yet no necessity for the conservation of land. The improvements spoken only occupy a very small portion of the valley. The eight miles or so between San Fernando and Van Nuys is over a stretch of country where the land is of the most desirable and exeent for the numerous crops of wheat it has produced in years past, is virgin soil. Water has been developed in many sections with great success by means of wells, indicating a vast underground supply which has only been tapped experinentally. Even if the Owens river supply was not near at hand, it is probable that the development of the valley could go ahead for a long time by drawing upon the underground storage. With the water to be supplied by the aqueduct the great area of the San Fernando Valley with its immense acreage of fertile soil is excelled by no other section of California in a well-founded promise of marvelous things to be accomplished in the near future.

RANDALL GAVE COUNTRY DISTRICT A CONGRESSMAN.

An interesting side light has been thrown upon the formation of the new Ninth Congressional district in the last legislature. The Los Angeles politicians had framed up a congressional districting bill which divided Los Angeles county into districts, by running the dividing line through the center of Los Angeles, thus giving that city absolute control of both districts. The country portion of the county was dismembered and thrown into both districts in such a way as to destroy the voice of the country in naming a congressman. This bill was introduced in the senate.

But over in the Assembly, Mr. Randall, who is a candidate for Congress, drew the lines of a districting bill giving almost all of the city to one district, and almost all of the county outside to the other. He thus assured control of one of the congressmen to the section of the country which is outside of the city.

It is an interesting fact to know that Senator Bell, who is a candidate against Mr. Randall, not only supported the city scheme, but actually voted against Randall's fairer plan, which was nevertheless adopted.

TO VOTERS OF THE SIXTY-FIRST ASSEMBLY DISTRICT.

The voters of this rapidly growing section have an opportunity at the primary election Tuesday next to take such action by their votes as will probably result in securing a representative in the State Assembly at its session beginning January next at Sacramento. The necessity of having such a representative, one who is identified with the valley and familiar with its needs, should not be obscured by any of the complex political issues which are at the present time being given undue prominence. There will be two matters of great importance to Los Angeles County coming before the next legislature for action in which the cities and the country district adjacent to Los Angeles have a vital interest. These are the questions of a new county charter and the bill for the consolidation of city and county. While there is yet the possibility that these measures may not be as objectionable as it is feared, it is certainly the part of wisdom for the people residing in the San Fernando Valley north of and adjoining Los Angeles to be prepared to protect their interests should such protection be necessary. Everyone acknowledges the probability that the ultimate destiny of at least a portion of this valley is absorption in the great and rapidly growing city at our door, but before that becomes a fact there are a number of local problems to be worked out in every one of our growing communities which must be worked out by ourselves or be left unaccomplished for possibly many years. In a union of this nature there are naturally two sides to be considered, and in the nature of things each party should look out for itself. That the City of Los Angeles is capable of taking care of its own interests and will do so is unquestionable, and in doing this the representatives of that city may very naturally be depended upon to look out for its inetrests without any too fine a consideration for the communities to be absorbed.

In addition to the measures spoken of above, there will probably be legislation in regard to the distribution of the Owens River water and power, in which again there may be a conflict of interests.

The undersigned has been a resident of the San Fernando Valley for thirty years, and a taxpayer during that time. As a pioneer he has been compelled to absorb some knowledge of its problems, and in regard to the water question particularly has had considerable information thrust upon him.

There are doubtless other persons who might have been selected to represent the district more ably, but the fact is that at present the choice of voters lies between Messrs. Roberts, Ready and nimself. Individually, either of the first named gentlemen may be well qualified to fill the position they aspire to, but both are lacking the interest which would be the best guarantee that they will most effectually represent the residents and property owners of this valley, in which so many enterprises are so rapidly centering. Mr. Roberts in particular may be fairly regarded as representing the City of Los Angeles in an especial manner, politically and otherwise.

We do heartily believe "our good Lord" has brought this situation relative to "infantile paralysis" about to open the eyes of more parents to the awfulness of the liquor traffic over our land, and just at this time that they may vote for Eugene Chafin, the Prohibition candidate for president, and forever rid our land of whisky politics.

In 1911 there were 440 deaths from infantile paralysis, and, according to the best medical scientists of the world, 90,000 deaths of children under two years of age from alcohol or with alcohol as the primary cause. Dr. J. Wallace Beveridge, of Cornell University, shows very clearly the scientific relation between alcohol and infant mortality—not that the infants drink, but that drink is the underlying cause of infantile mortality. He says: "The mother of a young child should not touch alcoholic liquor in any form. Alcohol is not a food. It does not supply to women the nourishment of which at certain periods of their lives they are in particular need. On the contrary, the mother of a babe who drinks alcoholic beverages in the mildest form runs the risk of cutting off the supply of milk that nature intended a babe to have. If not entirely cut off, it is so impoverished that the infant's health is ruined. Alcohol produces a chemical change in the proteids, carbohydrates, and the fats, which are the chief factors in the milk. Dr. W. C. Sullivan, of the general hospital, Liverpool, reports his observations made on female prisoners in the alcohol ward. He took the history of 120 women, to whom 600 children were born. Fifty-five per cent were dead at birth, 22 per cent died before the third year, 11 per cent died before the fifteenth year, and the remaining 12 per cent may have lived or died, not being able to collect the data. These were cases where the mother had nursed her child. In 87.4 per cent of the cases the mother had used alcohol in some form—beer, gin or whisky. "The latest and most authentic statistics show over 10 per cent of all mortality is due to the abuse of alcohol, and fully 20 per cent of all disease is traceable to this cause." A few quotations from authorities on the subject: "Alcohol imparts no power to man."—Sir B. W. Richardson. "Alcohol is neither food nor physic."—Dr. John Hoggenbothan. "Alcohol is poison. If it is a food, it is a poisonous food."—Dr. F. Peterson, New York. "Alcoholism in one or both parents exerts its influence in the production of feeble-minded or epileptic children."—Royal Commission of Feeble-minded. "Ninety thousand children under two years of age have died on account of the use of alcohol in the past year."—Dr. McFarland. Now, in view of all these facts, why make so much fuss about infantile paralysis, when only 440 deaths occurred, and 90,000 occurred from alcohol? Is it not high time to be afraid of alcohol, and vote it out of existence at every ballot box, city, county, state and nation? But we have not had it in politics, and we have alcohol in politics, and most of us never knew when it was not in our lives. You must want it to stay, or you would vote for a party which would put it out.

MRS. HATTIE E. GAYLORD,
President.

"WITH TOUCH OF ELBOW."

A friend hands in a very appreciative notice of the book written by our late fellow townsman, Capt. J. M. Wells, under the above title, from an Idaho paper. The article opens with a reference to Capt. Wells' prominence both as a soldier and a citizen, he having filled prominent positions in both capacities. We quote the following:

Captain Wells' extreme modesty alone has stood in his way to fame, which his delightful and inspiring volume bids fair to overcome.

We have had many histories of the Civil war. This is not so much a history after the stereotyped manner of war historians, although it is a most vivid and thrilling history of the special parts of the war history touched upon, but it is in particular a record of the rank and file, a record of what the common soldier did in camp and in battle and in prison.

It is the tribute of a brilliant and critical mind to the grand heroism and patience of the men who stood in the ranks and dared the imminent and deadly breach, who fell in the wilderness or with Hooker among the clouds and who rest, many of them, in unknown and unvisited tombs.

The following local matter was crowded out of the issue of last week.

VALLEY VIEW.

"All things come to those who wait." We have been, like many others, waiting for the water collector, and he finally showed up, with $1.25 rates at that. This is pleasing to the numerous consumers of the company. And now we patiently wait for the ornamental lights that were promised us so long ago, but sincerely hope our waiting will not be too long.

Mr. Lyman Adams of Pacific avenue was one of the many old soldiers who enjoyed to the limit the good time at the camp of the Southern California Veterans Association at Huntington Beach, Tuesday. This was given by the Bartlett-Logan Post of Los Angeles. The camp was under the government of the ladies of the different posts who furnished a most sumptuous lunch, one of the principal dishes on the bill of fare being beans. In fact, it was termed a bean dinner. Mr. Adams who has eighty years to his credit, is as spry as any of the boys and, as he says, believes in having a good time while you are young.

CASA VERDUGO AND NORTH GLENDALE.

Deeds were filed on the 17th inst. whereby the ground for the North End school was transferred by F. E. Balthis and N. C. Kelley to Glendale School District No. 1. The site comprises the block of twenty-eight lots bounded on the east by Central avenue, on the north by Dryden street, on the west by Melrose avenue, and on the south by Park avenue, having all the street improvements in, with an area to street centers of 5.88 acres. That the school district made a good purchase is shown by the claim that the lots could be marketed today above cost price. The Glendale line passes 500 feet to the east, and the Burbank line the same distance on the south.

Pursuant to advertisement for plans, nine designs were submitted for the school buildings. The drawings most favored by the advisory committee, Messrs. Keyes, Holman and Black, were submitted by Architect Fairchild of Glendale. They call for a brick building of about 90x100 feet, one story high. The skyline is an irregular and ornamental coping. The main entrance recedes between side columns, with rear steps ascending to the doors of the auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 250. Four recitation rooms, two on either side of the main entrance, each with accommodations for forty scholars. The design admits of two or four more rooms of like capacity being added as needed in the future.

THE WRONG INTERPRETATION.

(Hollywood Citizen)

Members of the Lissner political machine are beginning to chafe under the criticism that is being made on the actions of their "committee of fifteen" and are beginning to advocate a primary plan that would make unnecessary any effort to unite the support of the Progressives upon certain Progressive candidates. The primary plan advocated by leading Progressives which permits second and third choices, is desirable, and much trouble will be done away with once such a system is instituted. But we believe that the Lissner forces are laboring under a misapprehension if they believe that the public is criticising them for attempting to unite the support of Progressives upon definite candidates. It isn't this that is being criticised, but rather the methods that are being taken to unite that support without giving due consideration to the wishes of the Progressives whose strength they desire to unite. The average citizen is keen enough to see that with two or three Progressives running against one reactionary, the reactionary is most apt to be successful and the citizen who sees this is willing to do his part toward centering the strength of the forces.

The people criticise those actions on the part of the machine as were evidensed in Chas. H. Randall's Congressional district where the machine put up a candidate to oppose as clean and conscientious and progressive a candidate as could be found, simply because that candidate did not knuckle down and do the leaders' bidding at every turn. It isn't leadership that the people are decrying. They owe much to the men who helped lead the battles for reform in this state, but they want the power which they granted these leaders used for the purposes for which it was granted.

R. H. Whitter, who recently bought acreage of D. E. Fuller on Kenneth Road, is putting in the foundation for a fine residence. Mr. Whitter has already spent considerable money in improvement of the grounds and for ornamental trees and shrubbery.

Softening the Blow.

A young Virginia woman who was very ill was approached by her colored servant, who said, "Miss May, mah mothah dun had a cousin what had de same ailments what you dun got." "Is that so, Cora?" replied the lady. "Yes sum," responded Cora, encouraged, "but mah mothah's cousin she died. And she did." "Well, Cora," said her mistress, angry that she should tell her such a tale at such an inopportune time, "if that's all you have to say to me you can leave the room and don't come in again. I don't want to hear such stories." Cora was thoroughly frightened at what she had done and wished to ameliorate her ill chosen story, so she thought for a moment and, turning to go, said, "Well, Miss May, mah mothah tole me she died mighty easy."

Between two evils choose neither. Between two goods choose both.—Edwards.

Butter on His Pie.

Mr. MacNaughton, millionaire lumber merchant, gazed at the check which had just been handed him with a solmen face.

"Doesn't it look big enough?" asked the man who had made out the check.

"Oh, it's big enough," said MacNaughton, "but there's nothing looks very big these days. I'm minded of the first days I spent in this country—no matter how many years ago—that was when money looked big to me.

"When I landed I went with a friend that had been over here six months to the house where he boarded and lodged, and well, too, for a sum that appears rideec'lous to me now, as I look back to it.

"When we were in the midst o' the dinner that was my first meal Sandy MacLaughlin put his mouth close to my ear and whispered to me:

"'Put butter on your pie, Angus. Three dollars a week is nae joke.'

"An' I can tell ye I put a good bit on!"—Youth's Companion.

Couldn't Beat Him.

It was of Dr. Whewell, the famous master of Trinity, that Sydney Smith said, "If science was his forte, omniscience was his foible." Concerning this foible an amusing story is told. A rival talker resolved for once to get the better of Whewell and crammed the subject of Chinese metaphysics. He lost no time in dexterously leading the conversation toward the topic and at once fluently and confidently expressed his opinions, when, to his astonishment, Whewell rushed into the subject quite at home and in direct contradiction to his views. "Sir," said the master, "will you have the goodness to give me the authority upon which the opinions you have expressed are based?" "Certainly," said his opponent—"an article in the Encyclopaedia Britannica." "Oh!" said Whewell. "I wrote the article myself ten years ago and have since seen good reasons to change my views!"

Precepts and Practices.

A mother had impressed upon the mind of her little boy the importance of keeping the commandments. One day he was tempted to take an orange from a basket where he could do so without being detected. He had not, however, gone far before it came into his mind, "Thou shalt not steal." His conscience was troubled. He thought he would carry it back at once, but then it was so nice. He, however, decided at last to be honest with the command and not to steal. So he returned it and went away, if not with the orange, with what was better, a clear conscience. When his mother asked him if he had been a good boy all the day he was a little confused and said:

"I don't know; pretty good. I guess I haven't broken any of the commandments, but I guess I cracked one of them."—Mack's Monthly.

The Mustache.

The home of the mustache is in Spain, and here is the history of its origin: After the Moors first invaded the country the Christian and Moslem population became so mixed that it was difficult to say which were Moors and which Spaniards. The Spaniards then hit upon a means by which they could at once distinguish their brethren. They did not shave their lips any longer, and they allowed a tuft of hair to grow below their under lips, so that their beards formed the rude outline of a cross. Thus the mustache became a symbol of liberty and fraternity.—Exchange.

First Use of "Magazine."

"Magazine," properly a storehouse (Arabian), has been annexed by literature, but it is interesting to assist at the birth of its now common literary use—in that venerable periodical, the Gentleman's Magazine. In the introduction to its number (1731) we read: "This consideration has induced several gentlemen to treasure up, as in a magazine, the most remarkable pieces on the subjects above mentioned."—London Times.

Hot Applications.

As a substitute for hot water bags in ordinary ailments, such as toothache, earache and other minor pains, use common flannel bags made in convenient sizes, with drawstrings. Fill them with hot sand or salt and they are safer than a cheap rubber bottle, just as efficacious and much handier to use. Keep half a dozen ready. They are of great help in time of aches and pains.—Ave Maria.

The Past.

We do not understand the meaning of our youth, our joys or sorrows, till we look at them from a distance. We lose them to get them back again in a deeper way. The past is our true inheritance. Its sacred lessons, its pure affections, are ours forever.—Frederick W. Robertson.

Political Carpentry.

Caller—What's all that pounding in the back room? Senator Talkem's Office Boy—Dunno. I heard the boss say he'd got to frame a speech and I guess he's doin' it.—Exchange.

Painfully Polite.

Old Gentleman (to boy on twelfth birthday)—I hope you will improve in wisdom, knowledge and virtue. Boy (politely)—The same to you, sir.

For Men Only.

She—Why did you call this painting "Peace?" He—Observe the absence of female figures from the picture.—Illustrated Bits.

When a liar speaks the truth he finds his punishment in the general disbelief.

He Was Posted.

A six-year-old boy was taken to the zoo by his forty-year-old father. They saw the elephant, they saw the monkeys, they saw the ox. Finally they got to the ornithological collection. The kid noticed an interesting bird in the eagle cage, and he asked:

"Papa, what's that bird?"

Papa looked at the label and replied "That is an Austrian eagle."

"Gwan!" said the boy. "It ain't no such thing."

"Yes it is. It says so in the catalogue."

"I don't care what it says in th' catalogue. I got eyes. This here bird ain't got but one head. The Austrian eagle has two heads, an I know, fer I've saw a pitcher of it on flags!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

For Fast Shooting.

The rifle for rapid firing should have shotgun weight, shotgun balance, shotgun trigger pull, shotgun fit, and the sights must be such as can be caught instantly without effort in alignment. The hands grasp the piece firmly, not with the rifleman's loose grip, but the left arm pushes forward while the right draws back, and the trigger is pulled by transferring the drawing back force to the trigger finger and not by any conscious crooking of that finger. The moment the bead covers the mark the bullet must be under way, be the aim good or bad.—Outing.

Held Her Audience Well.

Diggs—My wife is a wonderful vocalist. Why, I have known her to hold her audience for hours— Biggs—Get out! Diggs—After which she would lay it in the cradle and rock it to sleep.

Putting In Life.

Manager (to dramatist)—Your piece is not at all bad, but it rather lacks life. Dramatist—If that's all I can easily kill off two or three people in the third act.—Life.

Permission.

Fond Mother—My son, did your father forbid you learning to smoke? Young America—No, ma. When I asked him if I might smoke, he said, "Not much!"

A Sensitive Conscience.

Carrie—Goodness, it's that horrid old bore, Wilkins. Tell him I have gone out. Belle—No, I won't tell a story, but I will say that you have not come back yet.

Height of Diplomacy.

It was at the British embassy at Washington. A distinguished English man was delivering a lecture, and in his audience were many big diplomats and high society people. Just as the lecturer spread on the ambient atmosphere his most gorgeous verbal picture a large German tried to sit down quietly in a chair. He did sit down, achieving a transfer from the chair to the floor with a great clatter, which peeved the lecturer and annoyed the guests. Everybody in the room turned around and glared in the direction from which the noise had come. But that German was too smart for them. Having buried himself against the floor he stayed there, breathing a fine mixture of wax and meal, which had been rubbed in preparatory to the dancing that was to come later.

After the lecture was over Mr. Bryce, the British ambassador, found and shook hands with the astute German, remarking:

"Your fall and subsequent recumbent position were the most exquisite piece of diplomacy I ever saw in Washington."—Popular Magazine.

Discovered Through Chance.

By mere chance Professor Roentgen suspended a Crookes tube, through which an electric glow was playing, over a table that had a package of photographic plates in a drawer underneath. On the table happened to lie a bunch of keys. When the plates were taken out to be used they were found to be impressed with shadowy images of the keys. So the wonderful X rays were discovered. In this case, too, a frog chanced to play an interesting part. One was put, with other objects, on the table in order to get a shadow photograph on a plate in the drawer, and when the photograph was developed the skeleton of the frog was revealed in the picture. Thus it was learned that X ray photography could be employed to picture the internal parts of living animals.—New York Journal.

Call Us North Americans.

An Argentina peculiarity, noticeable also in Chile, is that many of the citizens begrudge our monopoly of the title of "Americans." They catalogue us at all possible times, under "N" instead of "A." They speak of us as North Americans or as "Yankis" and call our minister the "North American minister," quite ignoring Mexico and Canada. Certain Americans desirous of securing an increase of our trade with South America and of placating in every possible manner the South Americans, overlooking the practical side of the question, have acquiesced in the local prejudice and speak of themselves as North Americans, even though they do not address their letters to the "United States of North America."—Detroit Free Press.

A Treasure.

When Lincoln was practicing law a client came to him and wanted to know if something couldn't be done to protect him from his wife. He said she locked him out nights and threw dishes at him and battered him up with a club. She scolded him day and night and consistently and continuously made life miserable for him.

"Have you thought of getting a divorce?" inquired Lincoln.

"No, no; I don't want a divorce. Why, I wouldn't leave th' old woman for anything."

"You wouldn't? After all that abuse? And why not?"

"Because, squire, that old woman of mine can make the best flapjacks in Sangamon county."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

A Dilatory Painter.

One of the characteristics of Sir Thomas Lawrence, the portrait painter, was dilatoriness. "Lord Normanton," says a writer, "must have had the patience of a Job wedded to the politeness of a Grandison, for, although in 1818 Lady Normanton had already been sitting off and on for three years, I find him still in 1824 discussing in the politest manner what the background of her ladyship's picture shall be and only venturing in the mildest way to remind Sir Thomas that he had also himself been sitting to him ever since the year 1815!" The portrait was delivered in 1827.

Odd Marriage Belief.

An unmarried man or woman of marriageable age is something that is rarely seen in the Fiji islands. The reason of this is not far to seek. The natives believe that if a person dies while in an unmarried state his or her soul is doomed to wander about through endless ages of eternity in an intermediate region between heaven and hades. At the end of each moon they are allowed to look into heaven, but are never permitted to enter.

Fielding and Batting.

"What do you think of Fielding?" asked a young lady of a graduate of one of our universities with whom she had been talking about the early English novelists.

"Oh," was the answer, "it's important, of course, but it isn't worth much unless there is good batting."

Too Much Horticulture.

"She had violet eyes, rosy cheeks and a lily white throat."

"Yes, she'd be all right if she didn't have a voice like a raspberry bush."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Bluffer.

"My dear girl," said her mother-in-law, "any woman would be satisfied with what John says he gives you."

"So would I."—Puck.

A good action is never lost. It is a treasure laid up and guarded for the doer's need.—Calderon.

A Woman and a Tiger.

Although the tiger usually does its hunting at night, it departs at times from this habit, especially if it happens to be a man eater. In the province of Nam, in the northern part of Siam, a villager and his wife were gathering wood one afternoon in the jungle. Suddenly a tiger leaped on the man, seized him by the ankle, threw him over its back and made for the woods. The wife, mad with grief and excitement, followed. After going perhaps 200 yards the tiger stopped, dropped its victim and began to play with him precisely as a cat plays with a mouse. The woman, armed only with a stout bamboo club, stole up behind the beast and smote it on the neck. By great good luck she broke two of the vertebrae and killed the animal instantly. Then she dragged her senseless husband back to their hut and called the neighbors. The man, although badly mauled, finally recovered. In token of admiration for the woman's bravery the chao phya, or governor of the province, gave her a life pension and a silver medal.—Youth's Companion.

Hotel Lobby Ghosts.

Drowsing in a hotel lobby on a balmy afternoon were some fifty men in different stages of somnolence. Presently a bellboy passed shouting:

"Mr. Zachary Taylor. Mr. Zachary Taylor, please."

The name made everybody sit up.

"Zachary Taylor?" said a smooth faced youth. "That name sounds familiar."

"Familiar?" snorted the graybeard beside him. "Good Lord!"

Then Zachary Taylor appeared. He was a dapper little fellow known to nobody there except a personal friend who had wanted him paged, yet he had attracted as much attention as royalty.

"Scenes like that are common in hotel lobbies," said a clerk. "Nearly every day some name once famous is paged in New York hotels. Of course the boy is not trying to call from the grave the original possessor of the great name but the loungers in the lobby show almost as much interest as if he were."—Washington Star.

Expert Wine Drinkers.

An Algerian regiment will empty as many as a thousand pitchers of wine without losing half a thimbleful of liquor. It is a system which permits a general use of one vessel for drinking purposes in an absolutely cleanly way. It dispenses with cups or glasses, a great convenience when troops are on active service. A large pitcher with a spout to it, filled with wine, was passed from hand to hand. Each soldier lifted the pitcher high over his head and tilted it until the wine poured in a steady stream into his open mouth below. When the wine splashed inside the drinker's stomach for about a minute the soldier soldier next him took possession of the pitcher and repeated the performance. Not a drop is wasted.

Dynamite Whiskers.

The name "whiskers" is applied to feathery crystals which gather upon the outside of the wrappings of frozen dynamite. The "whiskers" are more "irritable" than dynamite itself. A case is on record where sticks of dynamite had been thawed out in hot water and the can of hot water in which it was done left in the blacksmith shop without being emptied of the residual scum of grease and whiskers. The first blow of the blacksmith's hammer on a nearby anvil was sufficient to set off the whiskers by concussion. The can was blown to pieces, but fortunately no one was hurt.

Webster's Portrait.

Daniel Webster once sat for his portrait to G. P. Healy, and the senator's remark when he surveyed the completed picture became one of the artist's favorite anecdotes in after years. "I think," said Webster as he looked at his counterfeit presentment, "that is a face I have often shaved."

Healy found Andrew Jackson a disagreeable and unwilling "subject," and he compensated himself by painting Old Hickory with absolute fidelity to nature, not glossing a single defect. The portrait gives Jackson an ugly, savage and pallid face.

Death Warning.

Oliver Wendell Holmes recorded his protest against the custom of telling a person who does not actually ask to know that he cannot recover. As that loving observer of mankind asserted, so must every one who knows whereof he speaks assert that people almost always come to understand that recovery is impossible. It is rarely needful to tell any one that this is the case. When nature gives the warning death appears to be as little feared as sleep.

Not So Resourceful as Most Girls.

The Artist—Think of all the rubbish they have accepted, and they refuse this masterpiece of mine. His Wife—Never mind, darling. Think of the price it will fetch when you are dead and of the good it will be doing me.—London Opinion.

Into the Jaws.

He—Why did Peekly attempt suicide? She—He claimed that his wife nagged him into it. He—So he jumped into the jaws of death to escape the jaws of life.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Pray, but swing your hammer.—Spanish Proverb.

Showing Off the Author.

One day the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, in a tramp through Cornwall, came to a little village in which a tea meeting was going on. Mr. Pearse entered the little chapel and joined in the tea. He was in the most unclerical of costumes, which was an act of sense on his part, but during the progress of tea one or two of the "leaders" managed to recognize him, whereupon one of them approached him and said in an anxious whisper:

"Be you the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse?"

"Yes—I be," he answered.

"I thought as how you was. Now, do you see, we want to raise a little money, and a thought have struck us. Do 'ee just come out quiet like and say nothing to nobody, and then we will put 'ee in the vestry, and we will go into the chapel and say, 'The Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, author of "Daniel Quorum," is in the vestry and can be seed at threepence each, the proceeds to go for the good of the cause."—London Answers.

The Top Hat In Sculpture.

The statue of Alfred de Musset, placed some years ago at Neuilly, just outside the Porte Maillot (Paris), represents the poet in the outdoor costume of his epoch, holding a silk hat in one hand. Personally I infinitely prefer this "dandy Musset" to the huge and cumbersome group outside the Comedie Francaise or the enormous composition in relief on the Cours-la-Reine. Musset is perhaps the only individual—certainly the only poet—who has three statues in Paris. The most remarkable effort in this line which I have noticed is the large equestrian statue of Mr. Sawbridge in front of the principal entrance to Olantigh towers, near Wye, Kent. I fancy he was a lord mayor, and, seated on a prancing steed, he is holding an early Victorian top hat about eighteen inches in front of his brow. A tight frock coat completes the tout ensemble.—London Notes and Queries.

One Didn't Count.

A local official, at a dinner in Philadelphia, praised the Quaker City ardently.

"I must even praise," he said with a smile, "our exclusiveness—we carry it so far, you know. Birth is not enough with us; residence is equally important, and they who live above Market street are doomed. Here, surely, is exclusiveness with a vengeance.

"They tell a story about a dinner in Rittenhouse square. At this dinner, as the fish course began, one woman whispered to another:

"'Dear me, there are thirteen at table!'

"But the other woman smiled and answered calmly:

"'Compose yourself, my dear Mrs. Cadbiddleder Waddle. Mrs. North-Broad is not really one of us. She lives uptown, you know.'"—Exchange.

A Hostess and an Emergency.

Lady K. had sent Parnell an invitation to dinner, but Charles, who was very absentminded with respect to social functions and unconventional in the extreme, had forgotten the right date of the party. He therefore turned up a couple of evenings afterward an hour before the time. Lady K., glad to have him on any terms, did not undeceive him as to his error, but hastily sent off several notes explaining the situation and asking some of her most intimate friends to help her in her emergency. She also ordered a hastily improvised dinner from a near caterer's.—"Life of Parnell."

A Natural Query.

The late General F. D. Grant, when discussing military neatness, used often to tell a story about his father.

"My father was talking to General Sherman in his tent one day," he would begin, "when a third general entered, a brigadier notorious for his slovenliness. After the brigadier left my father blew forth a cloud of smoke and said:

"'Sherman, I wonder whom that man gets to wear his shirts the first week?'"

Naming a Book.

It is not generally known how Kipling chose the title "The Light That Failed" for the book that helped to make him famous. He had almost decided to call the novel "The Failure," although he was somewhat dissatisfied with this rather prosaic title. One evening as he was sitting in his study reading by lamplight the light went down suddenly, when Kipling exclaimed:

"By Jove, I've got it! 'The Light That Failed!'"

Gilded Pets.

"Riches," said the ready made philosopher, "have wings, disturb our rest and require constant care."

"I suppose so," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "but human nature is human nature, and we will keep on wanting dollars the same as women want dogs and canary birds."—Washington Star.

A Man of His Word.

"Well, old man, did Binks keep his word and share his last dollar with you?" asked Hodgkins.

"Yes," sighed Downanout. "He did, but he'd made the same promise to twenty others, and all I got was a nickel."—Harper's.

Culinary Ignorance.

Mrs. Kaller—Cooks are such ignorant things nowadays. Mrs. Justwed—Aren't they? They can't do the simplest things. I asked mine to make some sweetbreads the other day, and she said she couldn't.—McCall's Magazine.

Sensitive.

Dentist—We must kill the nerve of that tooth. Patient—Then I will go out of the room. I'm too tender hearted to witness it.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

To the Voters of Los Angeles County:

Of all the offices to be filled in this county, none is more important than that of Judge of the Superior Court. We must have men of the highest degree of moral integrity and at the same time men who possess a broad understanding of legal principles.

Among those who have offered themselves as candidates for this office at the coming election, we believe that Louis W. Myers possesses these essential qualities to such degree that he will, if elected, fill the office worthily and with credit to himself and to the community. We, therefore, regardless of partisan considerations, strongly recommend his candidacy to the favorable consideration of the voters.

GLENDALE, CAL., AUGUST 30, 1912

Judge Conrey in a case involving the purchase of water in Santa Anita canyon by the city of Sierra Madre, approved the deal with a valuation of $2100 an inch.

The editor acknowledges the courtesy extended by Mr. Edwin T. Earle in the invitation received to attend the luncheon given in honor of Gov. Johnson Monday last at the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

An appeal made to the courts to pass upon certain features of the primary law, is alluded to by the leading "Progressive" organ in Los Angeles as an "attempt to defeat the people's will." In the name of the prophet—Rats!

If the approaching presidential election is, as is customary, casting a blighting shadow over the business of the United States elsewhere, it certainly is not in evidence in Southern California where everything is booming ahead as usual.

The NEWS has received a copy of a petition put in circulation by Alva Udell for the recall of Governor Johnson. Legally there would seem to be good grounds for this action, but as Mr. Johnson is not governing much nowadays anyhow, he may as well continue to draw his salary.

The Populist party which everybody thought to be dead, revived long enough the other day to have a convention at St. Louis. It stood up long enough to see its own shadow and to notice that the Progressive party had adopted the most of its old theories and then went to sleep again.

Judge F. W. Houser, is a candidate for the nomination to succeed himself as superior judge. Mr. Houser has filled the judicial position with satisfaction both to litigants and members of the bar. He is still a young man but is gifted with a judicial mind and deserves to be kept in the position which he now fills.

The NEWS acknowledges with thanks the invitation of the managers of the State Fair under the auspices of the State Agricultural Society, to be present when that event comes off at Sacramento, Sept. 14th to 21st inclusive. An unusually attractive program is offered and the fair deserves the generous patronage of the people of the state.

Another candidate whom the NEWS cheerfully supports is Judge J. C. Rives, who was also at one time connected with newspaper work and has proved that he is none the worse for that experience. Judge Rives will no doubt be renominated and elected as his work in the probate court has been characterized by good judgment, a thorough knowledge of the law and a high sense of justice.

Mr. G. Ray Horton, one of the candidates for Superior Judge, graduated into law out of the journalistic field which he adorned and in which he made many friends who are naturally and loyally standing by him in his candidacy for the nomination at the primaries next Tuesday. Mr. Horton has made good in his profession and has demonstrated his merit and fitness for a judicial position.

The Los Angeles Express receives the same Associated Press dispatches that come to the Times, but its readers might look through its columns in vain for an account of the speech made in Congress a few days ago by Representative Stanley, chairman of the steel trust investigating committee. The speech was full of facts showing to his discredit the part played by then-President Theodore Roosevelt in connection with Mr. Perkins in relation to the Tennessee Coal and Iron matter and the harvester trust.

We notice that the agricultural department advises people to stop eating frozen eggs. The frozen egg is the product of a frozen hen that has been fed on icicles and has been hatched from a China egg. They are not yet at large in California, but no doubt they will be put under the ban by the state medical society as soon as they arrive. The cold shoulder should be turned to the frozen egg. But being so well supplied already, California need not borrow trouble, the frozen egg has not arrived, thanks perhaps to Uncle Jimmy Wilson.

Although it is still summer time when business is supposed to give way more or less to pleasure and recreation, there is more activity in this section than ever before in our history, particularly in building. It is noticeable also that more new settlers are coming in than during the height of the tourist season. The unavoidable inference is that the rest of the world is finding out that Southern California has an unsurpassed summer climate where there is no unendurable heat to interfere with useful activities and where the lure of mountain and of sea is toward the pleasures that are attainable.

Next Tuesday the men and women of California will have a chance to express their preference for candidates on their respective party tickets. This is the same privilege which has always belonged to the voters, formerly through the caucus, but which they have too frequently failed to avail themselves of. This does not mean, however, that we disapprove of the direct primary. In principle it is all right, and will no doubt after some experimenting and amending, prove more satisfactory than the old plan. The California primary law has some features that are positively bad, notably the provision for the naming of presidential electors.

In this respect the old system was far better than the new. Under the old plan the voter cast his ballot direct for the group of candidates representing his party. The present system deprived the voter of that privilege without any compensatory feature, and the fact that the holdover senators form a part of the nominating committee, is an inexcusable injustice to the people, for in the present instance should the Taft Republicans elect a bare majority of assemblymen and senators, they would still find the nominating committees in a majority against them.

THE FOOLISHNESS AND THE WISDOM THEREOF.

The interest of the people in national affairs is great, as it should be, but at the same time there are no indications that any one is losing either sleep or money in conjuring up visions of terrible things to follow the victory of the party which he is opposed to. We fret and fume, and plan and scheme, but fortunately only for a very small portion of our time. It is well that we should feel our responsibility in the "running of the world," but are we not after all conscious of the fact that we do not run it? The old earth travels on its course through space, propelled by the same power that gave it the primal impetus; the seasons come and go, the clouds, the sunshine and the rain follow one another as they play their parts in one beneficient design, and the whole aggregation of humanity bending its power to the task of swerving one of these forces from its course, would exert itself in vain.

The greatest of our leaders in politics, science, and religion, are but pigmies in their wisdom and the events that seem to shape the destinies of a people often depend as far as our human vision permits us to see, upon circumstances unforeseen and incidents that to our finite eye seem almost trivial. So hearken to the voice of the preacher.

"I know that my earthly wisdom is as foolishness to God, but He has put me here to do the best I can—that is my task—and being done I shall be the peer of any man who walks the earth."

CONTRARY TO THE MORAL LAW AND THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Theodore Roosevelt is the head of the new "Progressive" party of the United States. He is its law-giver, its supreme head, its final arbiter. The party is as distinctively a political entity as is the Republican or Democratic party, and here is his final pronouncement upon the subject which ought to be accepted by the faithful everywhere:

"I wish to emphasize the fact that we are absolutely clear from affiliation with either of the old parties . . . Ex-Democrats and ex-Republicans alike we hope will share with us the task of building up the Progressive" party."

Thousands of voters in California, intending to vote for Theodore Roosevelt; to vote the "Progressive" ticket, have sworn in their affidavits of registration that they "intend to affiliate with the Republican party at the next election.

Hundreds of candidates for office, intending to vote for Theodore Roosevelt, the head of the Progressive party, have made solemn oath that they "intend to affiliate with said Republican party at the next ensuing general election."

Here is the old-fashioned code of morality, approved and buttressed by Theodore Roosevelt who says that the "Progressive party" is absolutely clear from affiliation with "the Republican party, and that those who support it from that party are "ex-Republicans."

Can a voter be a Republican and an ex-Republican at the same time? Colonel Roosevelt has accused the Republicans of the Chicago convention of breaking the commandment which says, "Thou shalt not steal," is that the only prohibition of the Decalogue which our "Progressive" friends in California have encountered in their brief but varied experience?

Los Angeels, Cal., Aug. 26, 1912.

GLENDALE NEWS, Glendale, Cal.

Gentlemen: The water bills for Glendale stamped "Accepted Under Protest" were made and sent out through Glendale before we had the understanding in the office with the attorneys about the matter. Pay your water rent without any reference to that and the matter will be adjusted with the next month's receipts.

THAT "LONESOME FACT" ABOUT VERDUGO CANON WATER SUPPLY.

Editor NEWS:

I would ask Mr. T. W. Watson, champion of Verdugo Canon water purchase, a single question: "Is it not true that the source of that water supply is in the BOTTOM OF VERDUGO VALLEY, just northwest of Verdugo park? If so, then is there any possible means of preventing its pollution when that region shall become thickly settled? Brick sewers, it is plain, cannot prevent the infiltration that otherwise comes from human habitation. How then can it be kept pure?"

Mr. John A. Pirtle, admitting my premise to be plainly correct, replied recently that the source was in a granite rock on the adjacent Verdugo hills. He says a bold stream gushes out there and is the real source of that water supply. If that were true, no one would be a more ardent advocate of the purchase than myself. That very fine water is what induced my settling here. But, alas, Mr. Manuel Verdugo, who was born on the banks of that glorious stream, knows nothing of such a source for the water. Before we invest a quarter million of bonds, let us have the truth. Some advocates (not Mr. W., however,) are said to have Glendale "Con" at 10 cents a share. I am a Missourian, perhaps.

THE INFANTILE PARALYSIS SCARE.

Editor GLENDALE NEWS:

Glendale, California.

Dear Sir: I am very glad that a committee has been appointed in Los Angeles to investigate the infantile paralysis scare in that city. For two months not only Los Angeles but the surrounding towns as well have been kept in a state of terror on account of conditions said to exist there. Now it is stated that reports have been grossly exaggerated and that the majority of the cases said to be infantile paralysis are other ailments.

The result of the investigation will be noted with intense interest by thousands of anxious and panic-stricken parents who are eager to learn if it is true that their fears have been played upon by an ignorant medical profess. who, not understanding the nature of the disease have hastily called everything resembling it by the dread name of Poliomyelitis. If this is proved to be so this experience should teach people to think twice before becoming frightened over reported epidemics.

Even at its worst 235 cases in a city of 320,000 population cannot be called an epidemic and the citizens of Glendale should not allow themselves to become terror-stricken because one case exists in our midst.

Infantile paralysis is not a new disease, as some doctors would try to make us think. In an article by Dr. Mark Wyman Richardson, secretary of the Massachusetts state board of health, which appeared in the Ladies' Home Journal some months ago, he states that "if we should attempt to trace the history of infantile paralysis our search would undoubtedly lead us back beyond the beginning of history." He also makes a statement which is startling in the face of the scare stories circulated by the various boards of health: "Certain it is," he writes, "that the signs of panic exhibited often times by physicians as well as laymen are not justified when the situation is viewed calmly and in the light of our rapidly increasing medical knowledge."

Let us view the situation calmly then and not allow ourselves and our children to become frightened by conditions which exist only in the imaginations of their creators.

Yours very truly.

THE ENDORSEMENT OF THE GOOD GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION.

The candidates for the bench of this county at the coming primary election who were endorsed by the Good Government organization are of such character, both as to integrity and general ability and fitness, as to make any possible adverse criticism of the endorsement itself, a matter entirely negligible. The endorsement of the candidacy of Judge Frederick W. Houser for re-election is meeting with universal approval. His private life is above reproach and he has made a splendid record as a judge The lawyers of this county are almost unanimous in support of Judge Houser's candidacy, and there appears to be a general feeling in the minds of all classes of citizens that his services should be retained.

Among recent comers to Glendale is Mr. Miles Gregory, former councilman in Los Angeles. Mr. Gregory will only spend part of his time in Glendale at present. Dr. MacDonald and family have moved to Los Angeles.

I. O. O. F. ENTERTAINMENT.

Odd Fellows, Rebekahs and friends of Glendale Lodge gathered in the I.O.O.F. hall on Monday evening and had a genuine old-fashioned good time. Mr. Frank Booth, as chairman of the evening, had prepared a short but excellent program consisting of music, recitations, etc. Mr. Rene Glover, violinist, accompanied by Miss Alice Shaw of Los Angeles as pianist, held the attention of the entire audience with their choicest selections and were never heard to better advantage, while the piano solo by Mrs. Thurber was excellent, calling for an encore, a vocal solo.

Something out of the ordinary and decidedly interesting was the reading from some of Margaret Collier Graham's books, by Mrs. F. G. Taylor. Mrs. Taylor also gave a very interesting history of Pasadena in the early 70's, an account of which will be found in another part of the paper. Mr. Waller of one of the Los Angeles lodges, was present, and recited an original poem, relating to Fraternity Rebekah Lodge of Los Angeles, giving every Rebekah a cordial invitation to attend their meetings every Saturday evening. Brother Roper, who is very well known in Glendale and better known in the Odd Fellow circles, having been a member for over fifty years, gave a very brief speech, but nevertheless, right to the point.

Mr. Lou Murdock very kindly read a poem, "Friendship, Love and Truth," and little Miss Mildred McKee gave in the most charming manner two recitations, "When Pa Begins to Shave," and "The New Baby," and was greeted with the heartiest applause. This concluded the program, after which games were indulged in by everybody old and young alike, and a good social hour enjoyed. Those who wished to dance did so to the strains of the violin and piano kindly furnished by Mr. Glover, Miss Shaw and Mrs. Thurber.

Ice cream and cake were served and when the last strains of that beautiful song, "Aloah," played by Miss Rand and Mr. Glover, died away, every one departed tired but happy.

REV. WARD IS HONORED ON LEAVING NEWMAN.

One of the largest affairs of the kind ever held in Newman was the reception given Tuesday evening by Mesdames Kinnear and Beall, at the home of the latter, in honor of Rev. Dr. Ward of the Presbyterian church, whose approaching departure was recently announced.

Members and friends of the church turned out in large numbers, and the evening being a beautiful one, the short program was given in the open air, the piano being placed on the porch and the guests seated in front. The program included solos by Mrs. Bone and Mr. Newman, and by little Maxine Merwin; duets by Messrs. Ewing and Newman, and Mrs. Bodin and Mr. Fleharty; a recitation by Miss Amsbaugh, and a selection by the famous Beall Juvenile Band of four pieces, including a tuba player, about 30 per cent smaller in diameter than his instrument.

All the numbers were well received and encores given by most.

The younger set played a few outdoor games in the moonlight, after which ice cream and cake were served by the ladies.

Dr. Ward, the retiring pastor, has made many friends during the very short time he has been in Newman, and his departure will be regretted by all. He is to preach his last sermon we are informed, Sunday morning.—Newman Index.

ELECTRIC ROAD DEVELOPMENTS

Chamber of Commerce Committee Has Satisfactory Interview with Manager Shoup—Private Right of Way Wanted—Looks Like Businass

The matter of an extension of the lines of the Pacific Electric up on the east side of Glendale has been agitated more or less for a year past. Some time ago the Chamber of Commerce appointed a committee to take the matetr up with the railroad company and use every effort to secure the building of the road as soon as possible, the railway officials more than once having expressed willingness to make the extension, Manager Shoup having made himself personally familiar with the territory interested by one or more visits.

The committee consisted of the following members: R. A. Blackburn, chairman; R. E. Chase, J. P. Shropshire, H. C. Tupper, G. B. Woodberry, T. W. Watson, Frank Zerr and J. A. Eppinger.

By appointment the committee met Mr. Shoup at 10 o'clock last Wednesday morning at his office, and the matter was thoroughly gone over.

Mr. Shoup stated that it was his desire to extend the company's lines through the eastern portion of Glendale, and although there has previously been considerable talk about making an arrangement to run over the Salt Lake road on Glendale avenue, Mr. Shoup's idea seemed to be that that route is not so desirable and would not open up so much new territory as would one farther east. In accordance with this desire, he gave the committee to understand that the company would accept a right-of-way through the city of Glendale anywhere east of the Salt Lake road, the objective point being the Verdugo Canyon, with a detour over to Glendale avenue. In accordance with the company's usual policy, a private right-of-way will be insisted upon, and the securing of this right-of-way is the serious problem now confronting the committee. The question of bonus was not discussed, as both parties seemed impressed with the idea that if the right-of-way should be secured the question of bonus might well be waived.

In regard to this right-of-way, it seems to be generally conceded that the simplest solution of the problem would be the route along the property line of the Childs Tract, which parallels Adams street, about 700 feet east, the entire length of the city. This is the westerly boundary of the Wing ranch, extending from Sixth street to Ninth. The committee held a meeting Wednesday evening to outline plans for the campaign.

An Astronomical Mirror.

One of the most remarkable scientific instruments yet devised is that constructed by Professor R. W. Wood to aid the work of astronomers. This is an astronomical mirror, the reflecting surface of which is revolving mercury elaborately protected against vibrations, and it magnifies in proportion to the speed of its revolutions. A metal dish containing mercury and turning on bearings carries on its edge a series of magnets. Encircling, but not touching them, is an iron ring. By motor power this ring is made to revolve upon bearings separate from those of the mercury container, but its magnets, attracting those on the container's edge, cause the latter also to revolve. Centrifugal force compels the mercury to form a concave surface, perfect so long as free from jars. This apparatus is sunk in a well fourteen feet deep and set upon a solid foundation to eliminate all ordinary shocks.—Harper's.

Kangaroo Mother's Bravery.

During a severe drought in a certain section of Australia the owner of a country station was sitting one evening on the porch when he saw a kangaroo lingering about, alternating approaching and retiring from the house, as if half in doubt and fear what to do. At length she approached the water pails and, taking a young one from her pouch, held it to the water to drink. While her baby was satisfying its thirst the mother was quivering all over with apprehension, for she was but a few feet from the porch where one of her foes was watching her. The baby, having finished drinking, was replaced in the pouch, and the old kangaroo set off at a rapid pace. The spectator was so much impressed by the astonishing bravery of the affectionate mother that he made a vow—and kept it—never again to shoot a kangaroo.

A Genial Old Duke.

Duke Max of Bavaria had no greater delight than leaning over the counter of some small shopkeeper, talking gossip or purchasing toys for his great grand daughters in Austria. Innumerable stories are told illustrating his character. B. H. Goldschmidt, a wealthy banker of Frankfurt, was once journeying to Vienna. Opposite on the velvet cushion of the first class car sat an old gentleman whose dress and looks betrayed no uncommon rank. "Are you on a pleasure trip?" asked the banker's vis-a-vis. "Yes," answered the latter; "I am going to visit my daughter, who, thank God, fortunately married the Banker Wiener in Vienna." "How strange," replied his companion "the incentive to my trip is the same. I am going to visit my daughter in Vienna. Thank God, she, too, is rather fortunately married to the emperor of Austria."

Royal Superstition.

Canterbury cathedral, like most great cathedrals, is decorated with innumerable niches for statues. At Canterbury a series of these niches is occupied with statues of kings and queens of England, and there are only four niches left unoccupied. An old tradition has it that when all the niches are filled the throne of England will come to an end.

Queen Victoria was approached with a view to a statue of herself being placed in one of the four remaining niches, but her late majesty was aware of the old tradition and refused. One wonders whether in the future there will be four monarchs of England sufficiently indifferent to superstition to defy the tradition and allow their effigies to fill the unoccupied spaces.—London Answers.

French Revolutionary Calendar.

Beginning with Sept. 22 the tour of months in the French revolutionary calendar was Vendemaire, Brumaire, Frimaire, Nivose, Pluviose, Ventose, Germinal, Floreal, Prairial, Messidor, Thermidor (Fervidor) and Fructidor, which ended on Sept. 16. Then followed five days, the Sansculotides, dedicated as feasts of reason to Les Vertus, Le Genie, Le Travail, L'Opinion and Les Recompenses. Decreed Nov. 21, 1793, this calendar was antedated to Sept. 22, 1792. It was abolished on Nivose 10, An xiv, corresponding to Dec. 31, 1805.

A Legal Stunt.

A suit having been brought against a defendant, his counsel interposed a demurrer that had the effect to throw it out of court. Soon afterward the same lawyer was elected to congress, and while at his post of duty he was surprised one day to receive a letter from his former client, saying: "I am sued again. Please send me another one of them things they call demurrers."—Case and Comment.

Everything great is not always good, but all good things are great.—Demosthenes.

Danger in the Dish.

Next time you shave cast your eye along the edge of the razor. It appears to be a perfectly straight line, but look at it under a microscope and you will see that it is really rough and jagged like a fine toothed saw. In the same way a dish seems to present a perfectly smooth, unbroken surface. Through a microscope, however, you will see a multitude of tiny cracks, little hollows in the surface and minute flaws where a bit has been chipped. These flaws are the home and incubator of disease germs. A chipped place only one-hundredth of an inch square will harbor many hundreds of typhoid bacilli. Cracks in dishes or glasses that are so large as to be visible to the unassisted eye harbor thousands of all kinds of germs. Ornamentation on the handles of cutlery provides the same breeding grounds, and this is why it is better to have only perfectly plain knives, forks and spoons. Disease germs live through anything except poisons or a long immersion in boiling water. They are not much disturbed by freezing.—Pearson's.

Sackville Street, Dublin.

Dublin is one of the finest cities in the British empire, and its public buildings are second to none. Two very different men have united in its praise. Goldwin Smith said that Phoenix park was the most beautiful of all the parks he had seen, and Greville, even more enthusiastic, wrote: "I am greatly struck by the fineness of the town of Dublin and of its public buildings especially. Dublin is, for its size, a finer city than London, and I think they beat us hollow in their public buildings. We have no such square as Merrion square nor such a street as Sackville street." Saia in a "Bells of Shandon" vein reviewed all the great streets he had promenaded from the Nevski prospect to Piccadilly. Of them all he says by far the finest is Sackville street, Dublin, as it stretches from the river Liffey to the rotunda and its gardens.

Breaking It Gently.

He is a rather serious minded boy who has more sense of responsibility than many grown persons. So when he was sent to his grandmother's to break the news of her aged sister's death he did so with much gravity and no little self importance.

"Now, Alfred," his mother said, "you mustn't tell grandma suddenly, because it might shock her, even though she knew Aunt Martha was ill. Tell it to her gently."

"All right," assented Alfred, starting out on his mission with mingled solemnity and eagerness.

Arrived at his grandmother's house, he greeted her with a sober "Hello!" and then proceeded to "break the news" by saying:

"Aunt Maria's dead, grandma, but you mustn't feel bad, 'cause she was pretty old, anyhow. You'll be the next one, I s'pose."

Cairo and Islam.

The Earl of Cromer, not without reason, described the Ulema of Cairo as the "guardians of the citadel of Islam." No other city in the Moslem world has so many students of Moslem theology and law or pours out such a flood of Moslem literature as does Cairo. Millions of pages of the Koran, commentaries by the hundred thousand and scores of books attacking the Christian faith, defending Islam or propagating its teaching come ceaselessly year after year from the Moslem presses of this great center of Moslem learning. Books printed in Cairo are read by the campfires of the Sahara, in the market place of Timbuktu, under the very shadow of the Kaaba, and are treasured in the mosques of Java and western China.—Argonaut.

Origin of One Graveyard.

The family of a member of parliament from Yorkshire has a private graveyard and has had it for several generations. The founder of it was a Quaker, and the rector of the parish in which he lived said to him after a dispute on religious matters, "Well, if you don't come to church when you are alive you will when you are dead." But the Quaker thought otherwise and founded the burial place, which is used to this day.

Every Indian Had an Umbrella.

One of the incidents of the early days in Great Bend that caused a great deal of merriment among the white residents was the time the Indians bought all the parasols and umbrellas that were for sale in the town. This happened in the seventies and was on a rainy day. The Indians were on their way south and came through the town of Great Bend. They saw a number of men and women on the streets with umbrellas, and, being plentifully supplied with money and a desire to own one of the handy contrivances, they got busy. The funny part of it was that they made no distinction between toy parasols, silk ones and the serviceable linen ones. It was not long until the entire visible supply of all the stores had been purchased. Then the fun began. Some of the toy parasols were made of cloth that was highly colored, and as soon as the water hit them the coloring matter began to mix with the water and drip down upon the Indians' clothes. They minded this not in the least and were seen going southward whooping and seemingly in the very best of spirits.—Great Bend Tribune.

Rather Particular.

"Now, sir," asked the lawyer, "can you give me the true facts in this case?"

The witness hesitated.

"Well, sir, can't you answer?"

"I was just wondering," said the witness, "whether or not a true fact argues the existence of an untrue fact, and, to carry the idea a little further, what might be the precise shade of difference between a true fact and an untrue falsehood, or, on the other hand, if there is any real distinction between an untrue fact and a true falsehood. Sometimes, I apprehend, analogy is less convincing than dissimilitude. The introduction of a startling contrast may enable the mind to grasp the salient points of"—

"You can take the witness," gasped the lawyer, waving his hand feebly at the attorney for the other side.—Chicago Tribune.

A One Night Dress.

During the days of the second empire a leader of fashion in Paris, finding that she had overdrawn her husband's munificent allowance and that a great fancy ball was imminent, went to the great man milliner, Worth, and prayed him to hire her a costume. He was shocked. Such mean expedients had never come in his line. The lady prayed. The great man denied. Finally the prayers of beauty prevailed. But she was to wear a costume entirely of his devising. He dressed her as the flag of Paris. The tricolor fluttered in her skirts, on her shoes, in her enameled earrings. Her hair was dressed to represent a stormy sea in which rode the famous three masted galley bearing the arms of Paris. The lady was enraptured. The great man only charged her 1,500 francs. The dress was hers for one night only.

What's the Answer?

Old elephant hunters who have hunted their quarry in India, Siam and the wilds of the Malay peninsula are agreed upon the following fact: Bury the carcass of a full grown tusker in any spot in Asia—it matters not whether the location be high and dry or low and damp—one year from the date of burial not a shred of hide nor a sliver of bone can be found by digging. Neither disintegration nor ants can be an explanation, for the phenomenon has been noted in the highlands of Nepal, where buried carcasses of other animals than the elephant undergo little or no change within a year, and elephants' bones disappear in localities where ants are unknown. So far the scientists have failed to come forward with an answer.—Detroit Free Press.

Green.

Owing to its derivation the word "green" was originally applied to the color of vegetation, but not to the color of the sea. No application of "green" to the color of the sea is quoted before Chaucer, but as early as the year 700 it was used for vegetation. The word is akin to "grass" and "grow," which verb originally belonged to the vegetable world alone. Vegetables "grew," but animals "waxed." "Green" comes from an Aryan root, "ghahr," meaning to be green or yellow, and "yellow," "gold" and "yolk" come from that same root.

A Different Port.

Mrs. Neuritch—So you heard from your sister. How did she enjoy the trip across? Miss Young—Well, she wrote that she was very glad when she reached terra firma. Mrs. Neuritch—Terra firma? Why I thought she was to land at Liverpool?—Boston Transcript.

An Evident Alternative.

"She married him in spite of great opposition, didn't she?"

"Yes. If her marriage doesn't turn out well she'll only have herself to blame."

"Good gracious! Why? What's to prevent her blaming him?"

Troubles.

In life troubles will come which look as if they never would pass away. The night and the storm look as if they would last forever, but the calm and the morning cannot be stopped.

Settled.

Meeks—The man who tries to change a woman's views is a fool. Weeks—How do you know? Meeks—My wife told me so.

One trouble with the pursuit of happiness is that other people get in the way.

Animals are neither moral nor immoral. They are unmoral. Their needs are all physical. It is true that the command against murder is pretty well kept by the higher animals. They rarely kill their own kind. Hawks do not prey upon hawks, nor foxes prey upon foxes, nor weasels upon weasels, but lower down this does not hold. Trout eat trout and pickerel eat pickerel, and among the insects young spiders eat one another, and the female spider eats her mate if she can get him. There is but little if any neighborly love among even the higher animals. They treat one another as rivals or associate for mutual protection. One cow will lick and comb another in the most affectionate manner and the next moment savagely gore her. Hate and cruelty for the most part rule in the animal world.—John Burroughs in Century.

Fined For Swearing.

In 1650 a law was passed in England for the "better preventing and suppressings" of swearing. It fixed the fines and directed that a record of offenders be kept by a justice of the peace and published quarterly. A lord could swear to his heart's content for $7.50, a baronet or knight for $6.25, and, while the strong word cost an esquire $2.50, a gentleman could relieve his feelings for $1.50, and all "inferior persons" for 75 cents—this for the first offense. You were allowed nine lives, so to speak. But after the ninth conviction you were a "common swearer" and were in danger of jail.

Keeping Up Appearances.

An extraordinary amount of money in London is wasted on keeping up appearances, says a London journal. Any number of people entertain lavishly, have a big house, imposing carriages, three men in the kitchen, the same number of footmen to support the butler, and yet the daughters of the house never have 5 shillings to spend and have to calculate whether a new pair of evening gloves can be afforded.

Her Dear Friend.

"What nonsense all this is about men getting on their knees when they propose," said Mrs. Parslow to her dear friend. "My husband didn't do any such absurd thing when he asked me to marry him."

"He did when he proposed to me," said the dear friend without thinking.

"Yes," said the prosperous lawyer in speaking to a friend, "I had a long wait before I got any practice, but I am certainly satisfied now with my profession and its emoluments. The early days, the waiting for clients, were hard, though. Why, do you know that I got so after awhile that when I heard a footstep on the stairs I could tell ninety-nine times out of a hundred whether or not the person was coming to my office?"

"Well that is strange," replied his friend. "Your sense of hearing must have been very acute."

"Not so much that," replied the lawyer. "You see, I made up my mind that they were not coming to my office, and ninety-nine times out of a hundred I was right."

THE INFANTILE PARALYSIS SCARE IN LOS ANGELES.

The city administration of Los Angeles has started an investigation of the conditions which brought about the exaggerated and untrue reports to the effect that there was a dangerous epidemic of infantile paralysis in that city. There were a few cases reported and some alarmist instantly raised a cry with the result that so-called epidemic gave way to a real epidemic of fear. Numerous instances have been reported where physicians diagnosed infantile paralysis when it was entirely different. Four cases that were quarantined turned out to be the result of too many raw cucumbers and carrots, eating too much candy, fresh fruit and vegetables, stomach trouble and summer complaint. One case reported as infantile paralysis turned out to be rheumatism. The senseless scare is now practically over, but there remains the fact that loose diagnosis and absolute ignorance of the symptoms on the part of some physicians is the principal basis for wild reports, which have had a more or less detrimental effect on passenger traffic in Los Angeles.

TRUTH ABOUT FREIGHT RATES.

Despite the effort of a number of newspapers to make it appear that the railroads have increased freight rates, the new transcontinental freight tariffs now effective show quite to the contrary. The fact that all commodities that move to a very limited extent in less than carload lots, and such commodities as do not move at all, have been removed from the commodity tariff, has been taken as an excuse to charge the railroads with an increase of rates.

In brief, all western tariffs have been revised: the dead wood has been thrown out and the tariffs adjusted on as nearly a scientific a basis as possible, consistent with the amended Interstate Commerce Act and the rules of the commission.

It has been charged that the railroads, in order to preserve their revenues, have deliberately raised rates on eastbound California products to such an extent as to imperil the business of the Pacific Coast jobbers. Such statements are a result of lack of proper knowledge of the tariff itself, and are furthermore founded on the wrong assumption that the proper and expedient way for a railroad to preserve its revenues is to hamper the activities of the shipping public.

The fact remains that in no instance have the carload rates been raised on California commodities. Furthermore, in order to simplify the tariffs and do away with the never ending source of annoyance from over-burdened commodity tariffs, all commodities that move to a limited extent in less than carload lots, and such commodities as do not move at all, have been removed from the commodity tariffs and placed under the general class tariffs, where they proobably belong.

"MILLIONS FOR THE PEOPLE BUT NOT ONE CENT FOR RAILROAD-OWNED STEAMSHIPS."

—James McLachlan

Republican Candidate For Congress in the Ninth District

VOTE FOR HIM ON SEPTEMBER 3

James McLachlan, twelve years in the House of Representatives, is the author of the $10,000,000 Ship Subsidy bill, introduced during President Roosevelt's administration, which calls for a line of steamships, owned and operated by the people, plying between the Atlantic and the Pacific, through the canal, thus depriving the railroads of every opportunity to take exorbitant toll from the Pacific Coast rancher and producer.

On James McLachlan's return to Washington he will reopen vigorously the fight to make this Ship Subsidy bill a law. He said this week:

"Two great protective policies must be maintained that the Pacific Coast shall continue to prosper. We must own our steamships in order to escape transcontinental railroad domination, and we must continue our present figure of tariff on oranges, lemons, walnuts, olives, raisins and sugar-beets."

The Los Angeles Express said of this bill:

"No proposal of great importance to Los Angeles and the entire Pacific Coast was ever suggested than that contained in the bill introduced in Congress by Representative James McLachlan. His bill directing the Panama Railroad Company, now owned by the government, to establish a line of steamers on the Pacific, touching at San Pedro and all other important parts of the Pacific Coast of the United States, Mexico and Central America, if enacted, will do more to stimulate commerce on the Pacific Coast than any other thing that could be brought about.

"McLachlan of this district, has become at a single bound, the foremost Pacific Coast figure in the National Legislature."

"James McLachlan secured more appropriations than any other member in the history of the national body. Some of them are:

For San Pedro Harbor	$4,261,000
For the fortification of the harbor	250,000
For the Federal Building in Los Angeles	1,000,000
For the Federal Building in Pasadena	250,000
For the site for postoffice in Long Beach	40,000
For the Soldiers' Home, to date, over	300,000
Total, over	$6,101,000
